J-1 Visa Waivers for Physicians to Work in Medically Underserved Areas

J-1 Visa Waivers for Physicians to Work in Medically Underserved Areas ^[1]

Submitted by admin on Sep 5th 2012

A J-1 exchange visa holder who received graduate medical education or training in the U.S. (a J-1 medical doctor) is generally ineligible to apply for a Green Card or nonimmigrant visa unless he or she resides in his or her home country for at least two years upon completion of the J-1 exchange visitor program. This requirement of returning to home country (to be more precise, the country of last permanent residence at the time of obtaining the J-1 classification/visa) is referred to as "Home Residency Requirement," ("HRR,") and is also known as the 212(e) requirement, based upon the section of the law that contains it.

This two-year HRR can be waived through four methods [three for Foreign Medical Graduates ("FMG's?")]. We are highlighting here the most commonly used waiver options used by FMG's.

The most commonly used waiver options rely upon an FMG's undertaking to serve a certain amount of time in a designated medical facility or area. Information on each state's programs is below.

Here is general information about the J-1 Visa program:

<http://www.immigration.com/visa/j-1j-2-visa> ^[2]

The applying physician must begin the process with the U.S. Department of State and obtain a case number. Here is the website for beginning the process and obtaining a case number:

<https://j1visawaiverrecommendation.state.gov/> ^[3]

The applying physician needs to have employment lined up to participate in the program and agree to begin employment at the health care facility within 90 days of receipt of the waiver, not the date his or her J-1 visa expires. The employment offer needs to be for full-time employment in H-1B nonimmigrant status at a health care facility located in an area designated by U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) as a Health Professional Shortage Area (HPSA), Medically Underserved Area (MUA), or Medically Underserved Population (MUP).

The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services maintains a database of openings in shortage areas:

<http://bhpr.hrsa.gov/shortage/shortageareas/index.html> [4]

In addition, there is another national database of available placements for this and similar programs, the 3RNet website, from which those interested should check ?Search Only Health Professional Shortage Areas ? HPSAs? in order to search rural areas that are eligible for the program:

<https://www.3rnet.org/opportunities/> [5]

The applicant must obtain a ?no objection? letter from his or her home country if the home government funded his or her exchange program.

The four most commonly used programs are as follows:

1) The largest program is the Conrad-30 J-1 Waiver program. Each state is entitled to 30 waivers per year. Below are links to each state?s Conrad-30 program.

2) The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) manages health the research and clinical care portion of the U.S. Exchange Visitor Program. This program accepts applications for two types of waivers--research performed in an area of priority or significant interest to the agency, and health care services needed in a Health Professional Shortage Area (HPSA) in the United States. Here is more information about this program:

<http://www.globalhealth.gov/global-programs-and-initiatives/exchange-visitor-program/index.html> [6]

3) The Appalachian Regional Commission (ARC) is administered in the 13 states in the Appalachian region. The ARC includes all of West Virginia and parts of 12 other states: Alabama, Georgia, Kentucky, Maryland, Mississippi, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Tennessee, and Virginia. The links below for each state provide information about that state?s program. Here is general information:

<http://www.arc.gov/j1visawaiver> [7]

4) The Delta Doctors program is administered in parts of eight states: Alabama [8], Arkansas [9], Illinois [10], Kentucky [11], Louisiana [12], Mississippi [13], Missouri [14], and Tennessee [15]. Information about most of these state programs is in the links below. Here is general information about the Delta Doctors program:

<http://www.dra.gov/delta-doctors/default.aspx> [16]

Below is a link for each state, including individual state contact information. In addition, the U.S. State Department maintains a list of state contacts. Should the state website not be clear about the contact person for that state, you may wish to consult this list:
